Moved to Chapel Hill in 1995 to attend law school at UNC and never left. I began my legal career in private practice in Pittsboro working primarily on residential real estate and estate planning. Since 2005 I have worked for The Nature Conservancy, the world's largest environmental non-profit organization. In addition to general corporate counsel services, my work focuses on marine habitat restoration and the acquisition of biologically diverse lands which end up becoming State or National Parks, National Wildlife Refuges or privately held nature preserves. My wife Raqi and I have lived in Governors Park since 2002. We feel very fortunate to have found a neighborhood filled with such warm and fun people. We have two daughters, Gracen and Ella.
